2. Aim of the course

The aim of this course is to develop students' understanding of the theories used to explain the European integration process, by introducing and evaluating the main schools of thought in European integration theory. Students should be able to apply these theoretical models to empirical questions of EU politics and policy-making.

3. Course material

- The lectures are the core of this course. Students are highly encouraged to attend the lectures.
- A reader with journal articles and book chapters will be available
 - in hard copy format at Unif Copy (Traverse d'Esopo 2);
 - and in digital format at MoodleUCL (<http://moodleucl.uclouvain.be>).
- During the lectures, the framework to understand texts of the reader will be provided. As a result, the articles and chapters in the reader are best read together with the notes taken during the lectures.

4. Exam

- There will be a written exam in January and in August/September.
- The exam covers all the material discussed during the lectures and in the reader (exceptions will be announced during the lectures and via the announcements on MoodleUCL).

6. Suggestions for further reading

- Students who are interested in examining the original texts of many of the authors discussed during class (such as Spinelli, Haas, Hoffmann, Moravcsik, Pierson and Checkel) are recommended to consult the following books:
 - EILSTRUP-SANGIOVANNI M. (2006), Debates on European Integration. A Reader, Basingstoke, Palgrave Macmillan. This book contains a reproduction of these basic writings, as well as a brief introduction to the 'classics' by the editor.
 - NELSEN B., STUBB A. (2014), The European Union. Readings on the Theory and Practice of European Integration. 4th edition, Basingstoke, Palgrave Macmillan. This book presents both the visions of the primary shapers of the European integration project (written by politicians) and the classics of EU studies (written by scholars).
- French-speaking students, who want to read summarizing background literature on most of the topics of this course, can consult the following book in French: SAURUGGER S. (2010), Théories et concepts de l'intégration européenne, Paris, Les Presses de Sciences Po. However, it should be clear that this book is only suggested as additional and supporting material. The book as such is not part of the course material.
